MUSIC IN THE SCHOOLS.

The reasons for continuing drawing in the public schools may be many, but they are not more numerous nor cogent than the reasons for continuing music. Drawing trains the perceptive faculties, the eye, and the hand. It is a mental discipline, and its application in after years is manifold. Music does all this and more. The reading of the notes is a continual mathematical problem, each skip of lines and spaces to the end of the piece being solutions of the problem. The various kinds of time found even in simple music is an aid to pupils who are slow in counting, and the beating of time is an invaluable aid to accuracy. The power of concentration is another valuable faculty which the study of music aids. The physical value to be gained is another important reason, not to be overlooked. The development of the lungs, the throat, and other organs used in one which all singers unanimously concede. The pupil sits up straighter, his eye brightens, he inhales deep breaths, his mental faculties are stimulated, and his whole system is benefited from the daily half-hour singing lessons. The moral nature of a child is bound to respond to the elevating tendency of music. The sublime words of some of our best poets, set to music remain always in a child's memory, bearing unconsciously good fruit; our national songs teach patriotism quite as eloquently as the finest speeches; there is no child who does not love to sing "The Red, White and Blue" and the "Star Spangled Banner." In no land is the love of country stronger than in Germany, and music with the songs of the Fatherland are as much a part of a child's education as mathematics. The coming in of the special music teacher is one of the pleasantest events of the day; books are put aside, children brighten up, and the half-hour work of breathing exercises, note reading and singing makes a pleasant play-work whose good effects are noted in renewed stimulation mentally and physically, which is an encouragement to both teacher and pupil. It is of course true that all children will not become musicians, it is not even to be desired; but the mental, physical and moral good which comes from this study is not to be overestimated, and many a child who has previously thought that he could not sing, has by trying and encouragement found that he had sufficient voice to sing some, and thus has opened before him a new and unexpected source of pure enjoyment. It is to be hoped that in view of all these facts, which have been stated in the briefest manner—merely outlined, that the people of this city will give the subject serious attention, and consider if the great value of this study to some thousands of children be not worth much, very much more than the few hundreds that it costs.

The Harvard Herald remarks that "If the democrats and populists agree that Hon. R. B. Smith, of Helena, is the right man to look out for their interest and nominate him on both tickets for congressman, he will certainly be elected. Let us hope that both the democrats and populists will see that this is the only way in which they can hope to be successful."

It all depends upon the populists. If they are to insist upon all their crazy financial schemes, the majority of the democrats of this state will not go with them; whether they nominate Mr. Smith or not. Anyhow, the democrats will nominate a candidate of their own. If Mr. Smith accepts only so much of the platform as the democrats can endorse, the democrats are quite likely to nominate him. But if the populists are going to reassert all the wild heresies that make their party ridiculous and dangerous and a menace to the prosperity of other states they will get no encouragement from the democrats of this state. The democrats of Montana do not propose to bring upon this state the odium that attaches to Colorado and Kansas, and so far as The Independent is concerned, at least, no countenance will be given to populist lunacy.

The Denver News devotes an editorial column to "The Menace of Coxeyism." There is no menace in Coxeyism. The menace to the country comes from newspapers like the News which ought to advocate Jeffersonian democracy, but instead seems to hitch up to every form of paternalism. The government cannot afford to go into partnership with every crank who wants to regulate something. If it would uphold the theory of Grover Cleveland, which is also the idea of old fashioned democracy, that it is the business of the people to support the government and not of the government to support the people, it would be doing a better service for the country than it is now, in encouraging anarchy and socialism. Brother Patterson is a brilliant man and it is painful to see his wanderings. Let him get back into the good old democratic highway.

It will take something more than the opposition of a few German bankers to keep Germany from going to bimetalism. Germany cannot maintain a gold standard like England. She has too much subsidiary silver coin. She must seek relief in the coinage of gold and silver on equal terms or she will go to the wall financially. When Germany gets ready to fight, as she will in the near future, she will prepare for it by making her common people prosperous and contented. When England is forced to bimetalism, as she will be before long, the young emperor of Germany will see to it that his own country gets into line.

The Great Falls Leader says "Helena is crowing and congratulating itself over the prospect of a four foot dam twelve miles away. Great Falls has a dam controlling fifty feet of fall already constructed. That is why we laugh."

Yet some of your townsfolk crowd seem to have been so much worried about the Helena enterprise that they sent sneaking spies to the front to prevent the people of Helena from securing this cheap manufacturing power for this city.

The champagne and coll cash committee feels good. The Anaconda Standard which prizes the truth above all else cheerily assures us of this fact. We are glad of it, for if cash and champagne do not make the committee feel good nothing else would. The next-morning-feeling will strike the committee in November.

As near as we can figure it out, the Butte Inter-Mountain is for Charles S. Hartman for something or other but not for United States senator. Will the Inter-Mountain kindly inform us who are its candidates for that office?

However, Anaconda may be consoled with the thought that the works can be run much cheaper from the Missouri river dam power, after its capital prospects have gone glimmering.

Yes, Helena is going to celebrate the Fourth of July. All the mossbacks united cannot prevent it.

The Hendon River Press is the brightest paper on the wrong side in the state of Montana.

CROP PROSPECTS.

Rain Reported From All Sections and some Damage to Meadows.

Observer J. M. Sherier, of the Montana weather bureau, in the weather crop bulletin for the week ending June 11 says:

"The weather opened with warm and sunbiny weather, but after the first day or two this was followed in most sections by much colder, with cloudy skies and well distributed showers, which continued to the close. The want of rain was beginning to be felt at a number of points and particularly in the extreme north, but as a normal amount of moisture has been received, there is no immediate danger of injury by drought.

"The low temperatures have had the effect of checking the flood which have been racing all over the state, and in most sections the high water mark for the present season has been reached, or the waters are already receding. Grass on some bottom lands is reported to be considerably damaged by the sediment left by high water.

"Light frosts have occurred at a number of points in the north although no injury is reported to have resulted from them. Hail at Bedford on the 3 d, 7th and 8th injured gardens and grain in that vicinity to a great extent and grasshoppers are also numerous in the same locality. Hail with less serious results occurred at Townsend, White Sulphur Springs and Bozeman.

"With the exception of the damage done by hail the prospects remain unchanged; and the outlook seems especially promising. Farmers are still looking well, grain is in a flourishing condition and the wool crop promises to be abundant."
